Also, at the.mark I suggest running oil through the engine with the drain plug out.... Put the drain plug back in and tighten it when your done running oil through. It should go without saying but I'll say it anyway.!!!!

At the.mark I show the hose going to the bottom of the coolant reservoir. Be sure the hose is installed all the way before positioning the hose clamp back in place.

1: At the.mark I show an electrical connector that plugs into the back of the intake where the pcv hose goes into the intake. This connector like any other electrical connector on this vehicle has a locking tang or a release clip that must be released before the connector is pulled off.

3: At the.mark I go over removing the brake booster hose but do not show it. The spring hose clamp can be released by squeezing the ears of the hose clamp to gether.

4: At the.mark I mention just using a brake clean soaked rag, be sure it's a lint free rag, to clean the mating surface before installing the upper intake. If you cannot achieve a perfectly clean surface I would suggest using a green scotch brite scouring pad to lightly, very lightly, scuff up the surface. Wipe clean with a brake clean soaked \"lint free\" rag after scuffing.

5: At around the.mark and possibly in other parts of the video I refer to the \"snorkel\" as an air duct. I use the two terms interchangeably. I'm referring to the tube between the air filter housing and the throttle body.
